HORIZON PTO

Elections and Committees

Many of the PTO Officers and Committee Chairs are moving on as their kids are going to middle school next year. As of the printing of this newsletter, a PTO leadership void is shaping up for next year. Without leadership and parent participation, events and programs are likely to be eliminated. Please consider volunteering your time. The PTO welcomes all and encourages sharing of responsibility. Your contributions are needed!

Nominations for PTO President and Treasurer are now being accepted. Submit any candidate names to horizonpto@yahoo.com. The PTO President (or Co-Presidents) oversee all the committees and lead the PTO meetings. They are in contact with Dr. Gehrig in regards to school volunteers, upcoming events and planning. This is a great way to become involved and lead the planning of the school year. Preferably, it is a 2 year position.

The PTO Treasurer administers the checking account, check writing, maintains the cash box and creates the monthly treasurer report. Knowledge of Quick Books is helpful but not required. This is a 2 year position.

If a board position seems too daunting, there are openings for Book Fair, Accelerated Reader Program, Family Movie Night, and Bingo Night.

Bingo Night

Horizon Bingo Night is coming!! Last year the Caught Being Good winners called the games and did such a great job that we are going to do it again this year!

The night includes FREE Bingo, popcorn, pizza and snacks for sale along with the ever popular Horizon Bingo Raffle. Tickets are a $1 each or six for $5, and 12 for $10. We have several awesome prizes donated. Don't forget we will be doing the 50/50 raffle too.

We are still looking for donated Bingo prizes (new toys, science kits, decorative items) & raffle items (gift baskets, tickets to local events, restaurant gift cards). Now is the time to re-gift those items lying around the house you'll never use to a good cause!

We are also looking for volunteers that night to help make it a great event. Please email the PTO or Julie Bowler at juliechristine22@gmail.com if you have any questions. Donations can be dropped off at Horizon, please be sure to label them "Bingo Night".

NEW RESPECT FOR CAPTAIN UNDERPANTS

I had the pleasure of attending the Anderson's Bookstore Children's Literature Breakfast last week. Among the authors who spoke that day was Dav Pilkey, the author of the Captain Underpants series and many other illustrated books for kids.

I have to admit that up to now I really didn't appreciate the Captain Underpants series. After listening to Dav's presentation, I have changed my mind and I want to pass along the main point of what he said.

Dav Pilkey struggled with dyslexia and ADHD and got into lots of trouble at school. In fact, for a long time he had a desk in the hallway where his teacher ended up sending him every day! He loved to draw and make jokes, but as you may imagine, that is why he ended up in the hall.

Here's what he has to say about those struggles and why he write what he writes:

"My learning challenges have influenced my writing a great deal. I remember struggling with reading as a kid, and finding it very difficult to stay focused on books. I actually had my own "criteria" for books that I would choose to read as a kid: they had to have short chapters, lots of illustrations, loads of humor, tons of action, and had to feature robots, monsters, and/or mad scientists. Nowadays, I write for the kid I used to be, so each of my books contain the same elements that I used to look for as a kid.

When I began writing chapter books, I purposefully designed the Captain Underpants books to appeal to kids who, like me, either didn't like to read, or who had reading challenges. This meant the books had to have very short chapters, a high picture-to-text ratio, lots of mini-comics and novelty "Flip-O-Rama" pages, and ridiculously humorous stories and cartoons. I really made these books for the kid I used to be."

He also has this to say about graphic novels:

"I think it's important to keep in mind that a lot of kids have a very difficult time when it comes to reading. It can be a frustrating time, especially when kids are making the transition from picture books to chapter books. That's a HUGE step, and there's a good chance that some kids might get overwhelmed and give up on reading altogether. Comics can help with this transition because the pictures give contextual clues to the meanings of the words. This helps with reading comprehension, and can give kids the confidence and skill they need to tackle more challenging books, including the classics."

He is intentional with his writing and chapter length. He wants readers to feel a sense of accomplishment so he keeps his chapters short. That way the reader can feel like he is making progress in the book.

For more on Dav Pilkey check out his graphic bio at <http://www.pilkey.com/pdf/dav-pilkey-bio.pdf>. Perhaps you'll come to a new appreciation for Captain Underpants as well.
